MARKET GRAIN VIA LIVESTOCK, SAYS SPEAKER

Farmers Who Farm Scientifically Make Money, Says J. E. Nesbitt

"The cows and the sows and the speckled hen,
"Have helped the farmer out of the hole again."

Quoting this ditty which he heard from an auctioneer during a depression in the nineties, Prof. J. C. Steckley, director of the Ridgetown experimental farm, advised the members of the two Newmarket boys' grain clubs to market their grain through "efficient livestock," at the Lions club dinner meeting at the King George hotel on Tuesday evening.

"That auctioneer said that that ditty had been handed down to him by his father from a depression in the 'thirties,'" said Prof. Steckley.

Members of the two grain clubs were guests of the Lions club following the exhibition and judging contest in the town hall in the afternoon. President Alex. Eves was in the chair.

W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative, introduced Prof. Steckley as a former agricultural representative in Newmarket, and former professor of animal husbandry at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

"The fathers of more than half the boys here tonight received instruction of some sort from the department of agriculture during my sojourn here," said Prof. Steckley.

"There is a real challenge in agriculture for the youth of our country, for agriculture is changing every year," he said. "I do believe that of all callings in Ontario today, agriculture has a scope and a challenge that it never had before."

Prof. Steckley, in urging the use of livestock as a means of marketing field crops, said that "of all meat-producing animals, the hog can turn roughage into meat more economically than any other animal."

In farming you need, said Prof. Steckley, a combination of knowledge of the soil, knowledge of how to grow crops and how to raise livestock.

"I don't care how successfully a man is able to grow livestock, if he hasn't raised the feeds in his own farm," said the speaker. "The price of grain in the form of chop, is around one cent a pound. If you have efficient hogs, they will make a pound of pork for every four pounds of grain they eat. If your hogs are not doing that, you can't hope to make money farming.

"You can see how your hogs can market your grain much more efficiently for you than in any other way.

"I have noticed how much more attention successful farmers are paying to their soil. There is more discussion of the question of fertilizer. In a balanced agriculture you pay attention to the soil and to marketing through efficient livestock."

Prof. Steckley told of two farms operated by brothers on farms 15 miles apart. Shorthorn cattle on two farms were fed the same, yet if you pr[illegible] animal from the second the first it was so bru[illegible]r that you could one mu[illegible]t away. The difference pic[illegible]he soil, said Prof. Steckley. The first farm changed to C[illegible]ows that farmers leadi[illegible] exhibitors, he said.

"[illegible] select a type of livestock that will do well according to your particular farm," Prof. Steckley said.

"Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick are feeding certain potatoes efficiently, and getting a better price for the rest of their potatoes than we are," he said. "We think that we have to market the whole crop."

A vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by J. E. Nesbitt and seconded by W. H. Eves. Both said that they had lived on the farm.

"Agriculture is the greatest business in this world," said Mr. Nesbitt. "There are a great many misfits on the farm. They just carry on and get a living. Others farm scientifically, and adhere to the lectures they get from the agricultural representative, and make a big success of it.

"It is the most independent business there is. If the farmer would listen to the agricultural representative, and read the farm papers, he could be the most successful man there is today."

Era printing costs little.

HOPE NEWMARKET MAY BE ON ITINERARY

The suggestion has been made that during their visit to Canada next year, Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth may be guests of Sir William Mulock, chancellor of the University of Toronto, former postmaster-general of Canada, former chief justice of Ontario, and frequently acting lieutenant-governor of Ontario, at his Yonge St. estate near Newmarket.

It is pointed out that Edward, Prince of Wales, was a guest of Sir William while in Canada.

The suggestion is that if such an event is possible, the Newmarket old boys' reunion, of which Sir William has been named patron as Newmarket's most distinguished old boy, should be made to coincide with the visit of their majesties.

Dress Company, Employing 14, Forced Back To City

Windows Broken, Persons Threatened In Economic Struggle

After a few months operation here, the Paradise Waist Co. is moving back to Toronto. The company finishes operation here this week.

Fourteen girls were employed this week and as many as 21 have been employed by the company.

During the time the company has been here girls from Toronto have picketted the plant, and a representative of the union said in a public statement some months ago that they would force the company to return to Toronto.

The four partners in the company have had the windows broken out of their homes in the city and have received numerous threats of personal violence. In addition, there has been interference with the display and marketing of their products. Garments have been destroyed en route from the factory to the customer.

The town paid the cost of putting a false ceiling in the Oddfellows hall, to make the building more suitable for a factory.

Twenty-six rinks took part in the Thanksgiving tournament for fowl at Newmarket on Wednesday. Six rinks were present from one club, Balmy Beach. For each game six rinks had to play at Aurora.

Grain Exhibits Should Be Sent On, Say Club Judges

Rae McClure And Gerald Pollock Win O.A.C. Ten-Day Scholarships

"Some four or five exhibits are worthy of competition in the national exhibition at the Royal Winter Fair, according to the judges," W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative, said of the grain show and judging contest held in the town hall on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Cockburn was speaking at the Lions club, where the boys were entertained following the show.

"I want to congratulate the boys on the excellent way in which they have carried out the work," said Mr. Cockburn. "We hope to have two of the boys of each club represent us at Guelph on Oct. 21."

Judging was done by Sanford King, manager of the Pickering College farm, and Ross Sibbet, Toronto, seeds branch, dominion department of agriculture.

The senior club was launched last year. The junior club was sponsored by the Lions club this year. The club gave each boy a bag of fertilizer and advanced money for seed to some of the boys. Each member of the junior club was sponsored by a member of the Lions club.

Gerald Pollock and Neil Faris thanked the Lions club on behalf of their respective clubs for the entertainment.

Lost Moustache, Has It Now Lost A Dollar, Now Is Reeve

With J. C. Steckley, now director of the Ridgetown experimental station, as guest speaker, Fred Thompson told a story of Mr. Steckley's days as agricultural representative here, at the Lions club on Tuesday evening.

Mr. Steckley was in a local barber-shop having a shave when Stanley Osborne, now reeve of East Gwillimbury, came in and said he would give the barber a dollar if he would shave off Mr. Steckley's moustache.

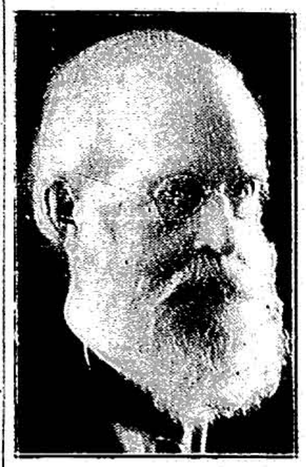

"I don't like to stand between you and a dollar," said Mr. Steckley.

Mr. Steckley went out minus his moustache and Mr. Osborne went out minus a dollar, Mr. Thompson related.

In spite of Mr. Thompson's story, Mr. Steckley still had his moustache on Tuesday.

Sir William Mulock Named Chief Old Boy

Dr. S. J. Boyd Is President Of New Reunion Association

SIR WM. MULOCK

"Turn the dark clouds inside out till the boys come home!"

Enthusiasm, suggestions, ideas marked the old boys' and old girls' reunion meeting in the relief office last Friday evening. Over 30 citizens turned out to show their interest. And when hands were called for how many had been born in Newmarket, only three could make the boast: T. F. Doyle, John Choppin and A. C. West.

Presiding over the meeting, Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd called first on J. O. Little, ex-warden, for his suggestions. Mr. Little stressed the part which the two bands could play in the celebration.

"If all organizations in town take hold, it will be one of the biggest things in the history of Newmarket," said J. E. Nesbitt, ex-mayor.

"My idea is that it should be short and snappy," said Dr. Boyd.

"I will get behind whatever is decided upon," stated G. L. Manning, general manager of the Office Specialty Manufacturing Co.

"Newmarket has turned out some wonderful men in all walks of life," said W. L. Bosworth. "I think if they could be drawn back, they would be a drawing card by themselves."

"Getting old citizens together is done quite frequently and successfully in the southern United States," said Dr. D. McIntyre. "The older I become the more I appreciate a quiet time with old friends."

"The bugle band is ready to co-operate," said Wm. E. Andrews. "A reunion would be a mighty good thing for the town."

"Mr. West has been agitating for this for several years," said Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales. "At the band tattoo we talked it over in a hurry and decided to take the plunge. I would suggest four days. There should be a registration of all who come. Friday could be musical, Saturday sports, Sunday religious, Monday military.

"For a treasurer we want someone who is used to handling funds. Another point is that with the new buildings at the grandstand Newmarket is ready for a horse show. Newmarket is becoming an important town."

Plans are being made to hold the 127th battalion reunion in Newmarket next July 1, Wesley Brooks stated.

W. L. Bosworth moved and Arleigh Armstrong seconded a motion that a reunion should be held. This was carried.

J. E. Nesbitt suggested that there was not too much time to prepare for it, and that it should be held later in the summer than the end of June as suggested.

T. M. Keffer and S. J. Brice moved and seconded that the dates be set for Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Monday, Saturday being July 1.

"More people could come in August," suggested W. L. Bosworth. Dr. D. McIntyre suggested that June would be preferable before Newmarket people had gone on their holidays.

"Newmarket has always had something on July 1 in the past," said A. C. West.

T. F. Doyle recalled Newmarket's last reunion. He said that an organization in the city would be needed.

Representing a nominating committee, Wesley Brooks reported as follows: honorary presidents, Aubrey Davis, G. L. Manning, J. S. Law; president, Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd; vice-president, A. C. West; secretary, H. M. Gladman; treasurer, to be named; assistant secretary, Miss Ida Owens; executive of committee chairmen and committees to be named by the above officers. On suggestions from the floor, Sir William Mulock's name was added as honorary patron, and Mrs. W. H. S. Cane's name was added as a vice-president. These nominations were approved unanimously.

Councillor Arthur Evans said that the fair grounds should be further improved and that the council should bear this in mind when drawing up next year's budget. N. L. Mathews, K. C., and F. A. Lundy spoke endorsing the proposal.

Those attending the meeting included J. E. Nesbitt, W. L. Bosworth, T. F. Doyle, J. O. Little, Arleigh Armstrong, Councillor A. V. Higginson, Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales, Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd, G. L. Manning, D. O. Mungovan, J. B. Bastedo, John Choppin, R. C. Morrison, S. J. Brice, T. M. Keffer, A. D. Evans, James Gibney, A. C. West, Andrew Hebb, F. A. Lundy, Alex. Eves, N. L. Mathews, K. C., Wesley Brooks, Dr. C. E. VanderVoort, Fred Chantler, Rev. R. R. McMath, Rev. Dr. D. McIntyre, H. M. Gladman, Leonard Little, W. E. Andrews, Marshall Lyons.

"Deaf Mute" Forgot Himself To Denounce Bradford Lady

People Who Live Along Highway Have Much To Put Up With

Editor, The Era: In your two last issues of The Era I saw an item in each regarding the arrest of a supposedly deaf mute by name George Taylor. I would just like to say I am perfectly satisfied in my own mind he is an imposter, as one day he came in here with his paper and I was busy baking and I said I have not time to bother and he gave me a terrible menacing look and then said (as plainly as I could say it myself): "You dirty, lousy thing," and I answered, "You are the lousy one." He had been here about a year ago and I had given him a quarter believing him to be what the paper claimed he was.

We live on highway No. 11 and we are pestered with people wanting something to eat or drink or to borrow something which they never return. I think it is just too bad for strong, able men like him to be going through the country getting their living by acting a lie, and asking people who work hard to keep them up, so they may have their living by riding a wheel and asking alms.

And here is another one of many incidents just to show you what people along the highway are up against. A girl or young woman came in one day and asked to borrow a can-opener. She said they were having a lunch up at the corner a few rods away and they wished to open a can and could not without a can-opener. Of course, I readily lent her an opener and the last word she said was she would bring it right back. We waited an hour and then my husband said he would go up and see about it. He found where they had eaten their lunch, but they were gone and so was the can-opener. We had to buy a new one but I do not like it nearly so well as the old one. And so it goes on with pails never brought back, etc., cement to mend tires, tire-pumps, wire, rope and every imaginable thing. We surely get fed up.

CONSCRIPTION ADVOCATED

Military-minded people are using the late international crisis as an argument for a peace-time conscription plan. The principal advocate of this plan says that Canada "may well have to defend herself in Europe or elsewhere, in addition to maintaining adequate preparedness at home." He uses the word "defend" in "a Pickwickian sense." There is no doubt of what Canadians would think if any European or Asiatic country spoke of defending itself in America. Another proponent of the plan thinks that money previously used to provide employment "would go a long way in training youth to healthy and useful national purposes." The training might be healthy, but the purpose, "defence" of Canada on foreign soil, would probably be unhealthy. This word "healthy" is also used in a Pickwickian sense.

Not Without Cost

Says still another advocate of this healthy defence plan: "Having taken the protection of the British empire for so long without cost, the price of protection by the U. S. A. might be more than we would be prepared to pay." Without cost? During the years 1914-18 Canada paid out thousands of young lives and mortgaged her future with debt. Canada paid and is still paying for the last war.

Not Worth It

Here also is the comment of the Quaker preacher, a frequent visitor to Newmarket, Rev. G. Raymond Booth, Toronto: "The sponsor of the idea has evidently imbibed a good deal of the ideas of Hitler and Mussolini. If the government ever gives serious consideration to this thing, we might just as well become a German province."

RADIO PROHIBITION

The Fergus News-Record says that if war came, "one of the first necessities would be to ban the use of all radios, otherwise the morale of the nation would go to pieces under continual hammering. Censorship is impossible, since anything might come across the borders. Newspapers would and could be censored, but not the radio." That those in authority might wish to ban radios is, we suppose, a possibility, and the suggestion comes to us as a shock. Others suggest that the authorities, in time of war, would use the radio to keep patriotic fervor at a white heat and to unite the nation in one great war effort. It seems to us that it would be more difficult to prohibit radios than to prohibit liquor, and that the admission that information or opinions were being kept from the Canadian public would destroy public confidence in the cause. It might be hard to convince the public that they were fighting for a free press, a free radio, and democratic ideals, if they knew that their democratic government was spoon-feeding them in the same way that dictators were spoon-feeding their peoples.

PRODUCERS' CO-OPERATION

Farmers should not overlook the things they can do to help themselves. Many farmers are doing two men's work simply because they cannot afford to employ the help that they should have, and we cannot suggest how they can take things easy and still make a living. Farmers do, often, overlook the advantages to be derived by a pooling of strength. They see the advantage of helping the neighbors with threshing and having the neighbors help them, but they seem slow to see the advantages of organizing themselves and their neighbors for buying and selling. In Essex county Harrow potato growers have derived real advantage from organization in the last three years. In fact, as the result of a potato growers' association organized three years ago potato acreage has been increased substantially. This year, 80 members of the association, planting 385 acres, raised 20,000 bags of "Lakeland Brand" potatoes. These potatoes were all properly graded and brought a premium to the growers. The organization is able to employ a manager and give the buyers service that the individual grower cannot give. Anyone who buys "Lakeland Brand" potatoes knows what he is getting, and by jealously maintaining standards, the Harrow growers have created a demand for their potatoes. There are probably just as good, or better, potatoes grown in northern York, but we are not getting the same price for them because we haven't organized and advertised them.

A CLOUD BURST

Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, the storm-cloud of Canadian politics, has burst out again, once more drenching Premier Mackenzie King with abuse. Mr. Hepburn says that he will have to live down his support of Mr. King in 1935. In some ways Mr. Hepburn reminds us of Herr Hitler. He is very clever, and gains publicity and support by singling out first one enemy and then another for violent attack. He won his first election by abusing the previous administration and the bankers, his second election by denouncing the C. I. O. and "foreign agitators." Now Mr. Hepburn has turned on the national leader whom he extolled in 1936.

Sweet Content

Now we wouldn't say that Mr. King is above criticism. The best criticism of Mr. King that we know is contained in his own words, uttered on election night, 1935: "We take up at once, as our supreme task, the endeavor to end poverty in the midst of plenty; starvation and unnecessary suffering in a land of abundance; discontent and distress in a country more blessed by Providence than any other on the face of the globe, and to gain for individual lives, and for the nation as a whole, that health and peace and sweet content which is the rightful heritage of all." Mr. King has the gift of tongues.

That Milch Cow

In his last tirade against Mr. King, the Ontario premier says: "Ontario is not going to be forever the milch cow of the rest of Canada." The contention that Ontario is supporting the rest of Canada might win acceptance from the same sort of thinkers who would accept Hitler's statement that the Jews were ruining Germany, but most of our people in northern York county are too intelligent and too thoughtful to agree with such demagoguery. Mr. Hepburn himself, if asked, would probably agree that Ontario benefits more from confederation than any other province. The central provinces of Ontario and Quebec are the chief beneficiaries from confederation. The west and the Maritimes receive greater federal assistance and subsidies but we in Ontario know that the extremities of this country pay through the nose and that these subsidies are essential to make confederation tolerable to them. The farmers of this province have a hard enough time making ends meet, but their lot is princely compared to that of the bulk of farmers of the prairies and farmers and fishermen of the Maritimes.

REUNION AND ALL THAT

Now that an old boys' and old girls' reunion seems a certainty, it would be nice to improve the appearance of our Main St. The old boys and old girls would forgive us for that one change. Members of the town council say that an immediate improvement could be made to the Main St. by removing light poles—the Bell Telephone Company has already moved its poles—and transforming the part of the sidewalks now used by the poles into street. At the same time the council should pass a reunion year by-law setting new frontage lines for all new buildings and new fronts. If we do this we will have a new wide street some day just as surely as young trees which the council has planted at the fair grounds this year will some day be splendid and stately adults. It takes faith and imagination to plant trees. It takes faith and imagination to plan now for a new wide Main St. The reunion committee might very well organize a business men's association to help put over the reunion, and the business men's association could help the council with the Main St. problem.

OLD-LINE FISHERMEN

That laissez-faire member of parliament, R. J. Deachman, representative of Huron county, has undertaken to explain why the steam-trawler, hated by the "old-line" fisherman, is better and inevitable. Mr. Deachman would deal with economic problems in nursery-rhyme fashion, "leave them alone and they will come home, wagging their tails behind them." The thinking member for Huron says that trawlers, which scoop up the fish off the sea bottom in a fraction of the time that the ordinary fishermen take, are as inevitable as the combine in succession to the cradle. Inventions, says Mr. Deachman, have always displaced men from jobs, but they have also always created new jobs. "If inefficient tools mean an increase of employment, then it would only be necessary for us to work with dull axes." There is a story from the United States that a WPA official happened to visit a government project and saw a steam-shovel digging a trench. He asked why the foreman did not put a thousand men with shovels to work instead of using the steam-shovel. Or, replied the foreman, why not put 10,000 men with teaspoons to work? Mr. Deachman's point is well taken, but would he make the same argument if he were a Nova Scotia M. P. instead of an Ontario M. P. representing a tile-drained farm county? In other words, is he giving sufficient consideration to the human problem?

Cutting Costs

"Our difficulty lies in the fact that our cost of production is too high," says Mr. Deachman. Fishing companies in Halifax pay inshore fishermen two and three cents a pound for fish which retails in Halifax for 20 and 30 cents a pound. Mr. Deachman thinks that if the fishing companies could just cut the two or three cents, or whatever they pay the banks fishermen, a little bit more, they could hold and extend markets in foreign countries where standards of living are low. "To expand the business by the acceptance of modern methods, increasing by this means our total harvest from the sea," would mean "enriching the nation, which means the people which form the nation." Does Mr. Deachman know that fishermen, using the methods of the fishermen of the sea of Galilee in the time of Christ, have had to release thousands of quintals of fish within a few miles of Halifax, in the last couple of years, because there was no demand for them at any price? Mr. Deachman will find a better way to open the markets of Spain, Italy, Cuba, the Scandinavian countries, to Canadian fish, and the markets of the world to Canadian farm products, is to go back to Ottawa and to carry out the tariff reductions again and again promised by his party to the farmers and fishermen of Canada.

Control of Production

Increased production of fish will increase the wealth of the nation just as the increased production of agricultural products increases the wealth of the nation. In the United States this method of increasing the wealth of the nation has ruined so many farmers, and so affected the prosperity of the United States, that the federal government has stepped in to limit and control production. It is not sound fundamentally, of course, as Mr. Deachman says, but it is inconsistency to ruin farmers and fishermen while manufacturers and labor unions limit their production to maintain prices and wages. Here is what H. H. Hannam, distinguished son of an Ontario farm, secretary of the United Farmers of Ontario and the United Farmers' Co-operative Co., says in the Rural Co-operator: "Shall they (farmers) go on working to capacity, dumping more and more products on a market which is already glutted? Shall they go on piling up more and more surpluses until the excess of supply over what the market can pay for drives farm prices down to half the actual cost of production? . . . My thought is that while we still have the competitive system, and international trade strangled by trade barriers and narrow nationalism, the farmer is being forced, out of pure self-protection, and because he can see no other workable alternative, to get some measure of control over his products which go on the market."

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville

THIS THANKSGIVING DAY

There has never been, I suppose, a single year in which we could not find innumerable things to be thankful for, even if many of those things were small every day things.

And this year is no exception, with a bountiful harvest, a wonderful countryside, steeped in autumnal beauty, a land at peace with its neighbors, and where freedom of thought, of speech, of movement and of religion is a sacred trust from generation to generation.

But I do not think that any part of the British Commonwealth of Nations can be thankful for the stand they have taken in the recent crisis.

An honorable peace, WITHOUT the sacrifice of Czechoslovakia could have been obtained had all the democracies, including the United States, presented a firm front to the bully of Europe. And even at the last moment, I do not believe anyone really believed Hitler would march—a bully is always a coward, and knowing this, democracy lost its last chance to show the Nazis and Fascists that the democratic people of the world could unite to save their democracy.

Hitler may be a bully but he isn't a fool, and he knew—none better—that he could not face a league of nations aligned against him.

I don't suppose many of us could stand by and watch a person being slowly murdered—I hope not—although one sometimes wonders when a wave of particularly gruesome crimes confronts us on the pages of our newspapers.

But we have watched just that happening to a nation. We try to ease our consciences by saying the Sudetens wished to return to Germany—we are learning every day, now that the hysterical shouting and tumult is dying, of the many who would have preferred to live under Czech rule, and too the horrible list of suicides and Jewish tortures have begun. And we smugly laud the peace we have gained at this price.

As I see it, we have not gained peace—only a reprieve and dishonor among the nations. Former allies are present enemies, and should another war come, as come it will, with Hitler and Mussolini gaining all along the way, where will we stand? I heard a noted American preacher say, a few Sundays ago, that there was not a single person in those nations involved in the recent crisis AND the United States, who was not morally responsible for the crisis. He went on to say that with every nation full of internal disputes—labor troubles, unemployment, crime, and dissatisfaction with the powers that be, it is hard for anyone to preach peace, for peace, like charity, begins at home.

No one, who has lived through a war, wants war unless it is those whose insane greed would willingly turn human flesh and blood into gold, but the galling thing to those who love their empire is that there was never a need for war; just a united front and firmness.

So we turn back to the daily things for which to be thankful—the homes where love reigns, the efforts put forth to help the helpless; the books which add a touch of color to our lives; the great music of the world which is within reach of us all and the friends who never fail us.

I found a harvest hymn with which to bring this article to a close—

God the Father, whose creation
Gives to flowers and fruits their birth,
Thou, whose yearly operation
Brings the hour of harvest mirth
Here to thee we make oblation
Of the August-gold of earth.

Where the harvest of each nation
Severs righteousness from sin,
And Archangel proclamation
Bids to put the sickle in—
And each age and generation
Sink to woe or glory win.

Grant that we, or young, or hoary,
Lengthened be our span or brief,
Whatsoe'er the life-long story
Of our joy or of our grief,
May be garnered up in glory,
As thine own elected sheaf.

NATURALISTS COMPLAIN

The Federation of Ontario Naturalists have some reason for complaint, in the interests of all of us, concerning lumbering in Algonquin park. Here's the Federation story:

"Lumbering is in full swing in Algonquin park. In addition to operations continued from previous years, a lumber company has established a camp for cutting in the Smoke Lake-Canoe Lake district. This is one of the most popular recreational areas in the park. It is also the site of several boys' and girls' camps.

"It is a shock to many to learn that lumbering is still carried on in Algonquin park, which has become famous throughout North America as a summer playground. Its unrivalled system of lakes and rivers draws thousands of tourists every year and the number is steadily increasing.

"It is a sad commentary on the way Ontario's forest wealth has been dissipated if we find it necessary to sacrifice our beauty spots and our playgrounds for the sake of the lumber they will produce.

"If, unfortunately, it is necessary to lumber Algonquin park, the shores of lakes, the margins of roads and trails and similar areas frequented by summer tourists should be preserved unspoiled by sparing the trees within two or three hundred yards of lakes, roads and trails.

"It is a notorious fact that the forest fire risk is greatly increased by the slash left behind by lumbering operations. The people of Ontario will not forgive those responsible for preserving Algonquin park, if they permit lumbermen to destroy the beauty of its lakes and trails or to create conditions which result in destructive fires.

How Minnesota Defines a State Park

"The Minnesota department of conservation defines a state park as 'a typical portion of the state's original domain of adequate size, whereby a small part may be provided for concentrated use, and the remainder preserved in primeval condition, accessible only by a system of foot trails and waterways, by which the future generations may study the flora, fauna and geologic structure of a beneficent nature, unspoilt, unimproved and unbeautified by man's attempt to improve on the work of the Master Engineer.'"

IMAGINARY SALES, REAL MONEY

The imaginary sale of fancy work held at the United church in Aurora recently deserves more attention than it received. Instead of bringing aprons, towels, fancy-work, possibly to be sold at a loss, and incidentally damaging the business of ordinary merchants, the ladies brought the equivalent of their gifts in cash. The church realized over $200 and the ladies enjoyed a social afternoon. The question is sometimes asked whether church suppers, which involve so much work, are worth-while? The patrons usually get more than their money's worth, at the expense of the church ladies who give generously and work hard. We hardly fancy, however, that the church supper will give way to an imaginary church supper, for the church supper has a social value. It not only increases neighborliness but it draws people within the church walls and may lead them to attend services.

YOUNG CHIPS TELLS MORE TALL TALES

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"I wouldn't have believed it possible unless I had seen it with my own eyes," remarked a Nuthatch to a Downy Woodpecker.

"What?" his friend asked.

"The number of Robins that are around these days," said the Nuthatch. "It seems as if nearly every bird I see is a Robin. I roam out in the country and along all the fences, and in the orchards and everywhere, there are Robins and Robins and Robins. I suppose they are gathering into big bands in preparation for migration, but where have so many of them been all summer?"

"Likely quite a number of them have drifted down here from more northerly districts," suggested the Downy. "There is certainly a lot of traffic in the air these days. Most people seem to be moving."

"Good morning, Young Chips Chickadee," said the Nuthatch, as the cheery Chickadee alighted. "I heard something about you the other day."

"I hope it was something nice," said Young Chips.

"It was that you had been away on a trip to Toronto, and that you had seen a very peculiar kind of bird, called the Phalarope," said the Nuthatch.

"Oh, that's quite true, but we saw other things, too," said Young Chips. "For instance, we saw some Shearwaters, and they are also very rare in those parts, as they are ocean birds. It seems that several unusual varieties of birds have been seen down on Lake Ontario this year—and it is a mystery how they happen to turn up there, when they are supposed to be a thousand miles away. The straggling strangers themselves seem to be as puzzled as everybody else."

"What do these Shearwaters look like?" asked the Woodpecker.

"Well, when I first saw them flying out over the water, I thought they were dark-colored birds," said Young Chips. "They were flying together. As a matter of fact, they were more gliding than flying. They take very long glides. One of them told me that a glide of half a mile was nothing at all. Well, anyway, as I was saying, the first time I looked they were dark birds and the next time I looked they were quite light-colored birds."

"Why, that's silly," said the Downy. "They couldn't change color in that time. It's possible for a bird to change color, with the changing seasons, like the Goldfinch does, for instance, but not suddenly like you suggest."

"I'll explain," said Young Chips. "The Greater Shearwaters—the kind we saw—have brown backs and wings. But their underparts are quite light in color. They have long, narrow wings and they fly holding them stiffly at right angles to their bodies. They flew, tilted one way, so that I could see only their backs, and they looked like dark birds, and then they all leaned over the other way as they flew and became light-colored birds. Do you understand?"

"Now, that is an unusual idea," exclaimed the Nuthatch. "Are these birds big or small?"

"Oh, big," said Young Chips. "They are a bit smaller than the Herring Gulls, and a little bigger than the Ring-billed Gulls. They belong to the tube-nosed swimmer family. And another funny thing is—that although very little is known of their nesting habits, it seems to be the general opinion that they nest somewhere away down in the south, probably on lonely southern islands, not in the north at all. They nest in our winter time, and wander northwards in the summer, right up as far as the Arctic, sometimes. They are great travellers."

"Why didn't you ask the Shearwaters themselves, where they nested?" said the Woodpecker.

"I didn't like to myself, because I am such a small bird in comparison with them," admitted Young Chips, "that I thought I might seem impertinent. But some of the other fellows tried to find out and got only very vague replies."

"There goes a huge flock of Bluebirds," pointed out a Robin, who had been perched in an apple tree near the others. "I heard you folks say that you didn't know where all the Robins were all summer, but I should think that you'd be even more puzzled about the Bluebirds. I don't know about you, but I rarely see them at all."

"I agree with you," said Young Chips, "and now, in October, we hear them calling and calling, and see them in large flocks, as they migrate."

"I heard Geese last night," said the Nuthatch.

"As for me," contributed the Woodpecker, "I ran into a great, straggling flock of Hawks, yesterday. I think they were mostly Marsh Hawks, but I didn't stop to investigate too closely, you may be sure."

"Well as long as there aren't any of those last mentioned in sight just now, I think I'll fly over to Yonge St.," said Young Chips. "I'll be seeing you."

POLICE COURT

Vagrant Gets Two Years Pen

Convicted on three charges of breaking, entering, and theft, John Procopchuk, vagrant, was sentenced to two years in the Kingston penitentiary on the first charge and an additional two years on the other two charges, making four years in all, by Magistrate W. F. Woodliffe in police court here on Tuesday.

A charge of receiving stolen goods was withdrawn. The charges were laid by Constable Joseph Jardine, East Gwillimbury.

The charges were laid after the Mount Albert creamery, R. R. Davis's bakery, and Norman Wilson's garage, all at Mount Albert, were entered and numerous small articles taken a week ago Monday night.

Procopchuk pleaded not guilty to all four charges.

"I locked all the doors of the creamery and went home around 10.30," testified Edward Watts, manager of the Mount Albert creamery. "When I came back in the morning at 7 o'clock I noticed that both doors of a small ice-box in the office were open. I also saw some fillers of egg cases on the floor and the eggs were missing. My fountain pen and pencils, two pounds of butter, four dozen eggs, a roll of tape for sealing boxes, and a claw-hammer were missing. Entrance had been gained by an east window, as there were prints leading to the window and away from it. I have lived in Mount Albert nearly all my life and I have never seen the accused before."

"I saw several of the articles reported missing by Mr. Watts in the presence of the accused last Wednesday," testified Norman Wilson, owner of a garage which was also broken into. "Constable Jardine and I were walking along the railway tracks when we saw the things. The money pouch was slung over the accused's shoulder, the roll of tape was in his pocket, and also the pen. The thermos was in his hip pocket.

"The night of the break-in I locked the three doors, two with hooks inside and one with a padlock outside, and went home at 11.30," continued Mr. Wilson. "The next morning two doors were broken open and also the doors of two cars were open and the rumble seat of my own car. My big tool-box had been placed on the floor and a socket-wrench and two screw-drivers were missing. A long tin box filled with sockets, a blow torch and grease-gun had also been taken."

Mr. Wilson identified the sockets as his own because one of them had been welded. He also identified the blow-torch and grease-gun.

Procopchuk told the court that he had never seen these things in his life.

When asked about the other articles he had with him, Procopchuk told the court that he had the money pouch with him for two months, and that he found the roll of tape and pen on the railway track. He stated that he had the pencil and thermos bottle with him for a long time, and that he had never seen the claw-hammer before.

"The bakery truck was stored in my father's garage, which adjoins the bakery," testified Ernest Davis, clerk in the Mount Albert bakery. "Neither the garage doors nor the truck doors were locked but both were shut and the bakers were in the shop all night. In the morning two loaves of bread and some cakes were missing, the garage doors were open, the cab door of the truck was also open and there were some burnt matches on the cab floor."

"I don't have to use matches, as I have a flashlight," stated Procopchuk.

"I received a phone call last Wednesday afternoon and on investigating I found the accused walking on the railway track three miles south of Mount Albert," testified Constable Jardine. "The accused was carrying an old satchel with him and I asked him to open it up. As he was doing this I noticed a fountain pen in his pocket and pulled it out. Mr. Watts identified it as being his, so I knew I had the right man. He was also carrying a repair outfit for shoes, a pouch, tape, and thermos bottle. The accused at first denied that the stuff had been stolen and then he told me that there were more articles up the track. He was also carrying a basket and in it were the bread and cakes taken from the bakery. Procopchuk told me that the people around Mount Albert were very kind and gave him lots of things.

"We went up the track toward Mount Albert and found the tools that had been stolen and also the tin box wrapped in brown paper that contained the sockets and wrenches," continued the constable.

"I first saw the accused sitting in a big tile that goes under the track and which is used as a cattle crossing," stated Elmer Coomer, C. N. R. section man. "He was about one and one half miles south of the station. He had a basket, satchel, leather coat, lunch box, and a long thing that looked like a box tied up with brown paper, with him."

"Has this man a record?" asked the magistrate.

"Yes, he has a very lengthy record," stated N. L. Mathews, K. C., crown attorney. "The record dates back to 1920 and includes eight jail sentences for breaking, entering, and theft, and two for vagrancy."

"What's the matter with you?" asked Magistrate Woodliffe.

"Nothing," answered Procopchuk.

"How old are you?" "Forty-seven."

"I think you should go to the penitentiary."

"I agree with you," stated the crown.

A seven-day jail sentence was imposed on Mrs. Cora Lundy, Newmarket, for driving while intoxicated. A charge of reckless driving was withdrawn. C. T. S. Evans was defence counsel. Mrs. Lundy's driver's license was also suspended.

"On the early morning of Sept. 15 in company with Constables Watt and Williams we saw a car driven by the accused start up on the narrow street south of Huron, which is called Second St., I believe," testified County Constable Aubrey Fleury.

"The accused woman drove the car south without any lights," continued the constable. "I stopped the car and she got out. Her breath smelled strongly, her speech was a little thick, and she staggered over to our car. She was in no condition to drive a car. Constable Watt then took her to Dr. Dales. We laid the charge of reckless driving because she was driving without lights and it was quite dark. Her husband was in the car with her."

"The road is very narrow, isn't it?" asked defence counsel.

"Yes."

"You followed up the Lundy car?" "Yes, we heard a motor, then the car started up."

"Did Mrs. Lundy give correct answers to your questions?" "Yes," answered Constable Vern Williams.

"Was she nervous because you three officers were in uniform?" "I don't know."

County Constable Ronald Watt corroborated the evidence of the two other officers and stated that Mrs. Lundy was quite hilarious on the way to the doctor's office. "She had to be helped into my car," the constable stated.

"I examined Mrs. Lundy and found her very agreeable," stated Dr. Dales. "Her pulse was very rapid, her breath smelt of liquor, and her pupils reacted slowly. I took a blood specimen and sent it to Prof. Joselyn Rogers for analysis. The certificate I received back shows that there was an alcoholic content of 3.3 per cent. The standard set by the British Medical Association is 1.5 per cent."

"Without taking the blood test into consideration would you say that Mrs. Lundy was under the influence of liquor?" asked the magistrate.

"Yes," answered the doctor.

Both Mrs. Lundy and her husband, both testified that she only had four glasses of beer at Bradford. James Wood drove the car up to Bradford and back again for them, they said. They drove the car over to Mr. Lundy's son's place but as there was a disturbance going on there, they said, they drove the car into the narrow street and Mr. Wood got out and went over to the son's house. The lights and the motor were both shut off. Mr. and Mrs. Lundy saw a car pull out, so Mrs. Lundy pulled out to let the car have room to pass. The car was driven only two or three car lengths, they stated.

Defence counsel pleaded for leniency, as it was a first offence and because the accused was a woman who had driven the car only a short distance.

On a charge of assault, Oliver Holly, Holland Landing, was fined $5 and costs of $16.95, or 20 days.

"You have no right to take the law into your own hands and assault an old man," stated the magistrate. "You're to stay out of Jarvis's pool-room at Holland Landing."

Valentine Longfield, the complainant, and George Jarvis, proprietor of the pool-room, both testified that Holly came in and started to hit Mr. Longfield who was sitting on a couch. Mr. Longfield had said nothing and Holly hit him on the head and also gave him a black eye.

Mr. Holly stated that he was outside and heard Mr. Longfield talking about him. He came in and asked Mr. Longfield what he meant and then hit him with the back of his hand.

After a lengthy hearing a charge of theft of a record-book laid against Fred Hood, Altona, by his half-brother, Elmer Phoenix, Holt, was dismissed by the magistrate. Defence counsel was Ernest Fatzer, Toronto.

Mr. Phoenix testified that the book was either taken or lost in July, 1936. Since then he hadn't heard anything about it until a few weeks ago when he overheard his mother telling someone that she saw Hood put it in the fire two years ago, so he wouldn't have to pay wages owing to Phoenix, Mr. Phoenix said.

Mrs. Archie Phoenix and Harold Phoenix both testified that they saw Hood put the book in the fire but they never told Elmer about it.

Mr. Hood stated that he saw Mrs. Phoenix herself put the book in the fire after taking it out of Elmer's pocket. Mr. Hood said that there had been some trouble amongst the family over a judgment that Hood obtained against the family.

KESWICK

Young Folk Give Varied Program

Rev. Dr. Mitchell of Stouffville occupied the pulpit on the morning of Oct. 9 at the United church. In the evening there was not any service, the choir assisting Ravenshoe to celebrate their anniversary services.

McLean, provincial secretary of the Ontario Religious Education Council, Toronto, and in the evening, Rev. T. T. Faichney, M. A., B.D., of Northern China. As these are outstanding speakers, it is hoped many will take advantage of this opportunity of hearing them. A thank offering will be received.

The following presented a very enjoyable program: Mrs. Ethan Morton, who was pianist for the evening; Herbert Faulkeard, harmonica selections; Lois Marritt, a recitation; Muriel Rye, a recitation; Marjorie Peters, a recitation; Betty Fisher, vocal solos; Doris McGenerty, a recitation, and a very fine solo by George Altridge.

In Memoriam

Winn—In loving memory of Arthur Winn, who passed away Oct. 14, 1937.

Oh, call it not death;
It is life beyond,
For the waters are crossed
And the home is won;
The ransomed spirit has reached the shore,
Where they reap and suffer and sin no more.
The family.

Lawson—In loving memory of my dear wife who passed away Oct. 12, 1937.

I miss you at a thousand turns
Along life's weary way,
For life is not the same to me
Since you were called away.
A happy home I once enjoyed
How sweet the memory still
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.
The flowers I place upon your grave
May wither and decay,
But the love for you who sleeps beneath
Shall never fade away.
Sadly missed by husband.

Lawson—In loving memory of our dear mother who was called to rest Oct. 12, 1937.

At Heise's Hill softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly,
The one we could not save.
A wonderful mother, woman and aid,
One who was better God never made.
A wonderful worker, so loyal and true,
One in a million, that, mother, was you.
Just in your judgment, always right,
Honest and liberal, ever upright;
Loved by friends and all whom you know
A wonderful mother, that, mother, was you.
God knew that you were suffering,
He knew you were in pain;
He knew you never would get better in this world again.
He saw the road was getting rough, the hills were hard to climb,
So He closed your weary eyelids and whispered "Peace be thine."
You left behind some aching hearts who loved you most sincere;
We never did, we never will, forget you mother dear.
Sadly missed by daughters and sons-in-law.

An interesting Thanksgiving Day wedding took place at the home of the bride in the afternoon, when Audrey M. Wainman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Gerald Wainman, Newmarket, became the bride of H. Miss Geraldine Wainman, her sister's only attendant, wore laurel green satin, with matching accessories, and carried a bouquet of roses. Lawrence Molyneaux, brother of the groom, was best man.

At the reception following the ceremony, the bride's mother received, wearing a frock of sultan purple satin, with corsage of pansies and sweetheart roses. The groom's mother, who was also receiving, wore a dress of navy blue sheer and corsage of roses.

For going away the bride wore a tailleur green cloth coat with sable cape. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Molyneaux will reside in Newmarket.

General Hockey Meeting Is Called For Tuesday Night

All Interested Asked To Elect Executive For Coming Year

Aurora's hockey season will get its official send-off, from an executive standpoint at least, on Tuesday evening. A general meeting for the purpose of electing officers for the 1938-39 hockey club will be held in the town hall at 8.30 that night.

The meeting is open to all interested in hockey, club officials state, and they hope to have a large attendance from which to elect the incoming executive.

The new executive, it is expected, will have the same problem as that confronting all clubs of the junior division: that of re-building a team around the left-overs from last year. In addition they will have the job of moulding a squad that will compare favorably with last year's brigade of goal-getters.

Last year's team lost three games: against Runnymede in the pre-season S. P. A. series in Toronto; a 6-4 trimming by East York; and the all-important defeat at the hands of Orangeville, the Ontario junior "C" champions.

Some of the spade-work of rebuilding the team for the coming season has already been done. Several of the best lads from the Jubilee Juniors are still under the age-limit, and every encouragement will be given them to sign up again. There is also a fine group of likely players in the Aurora high school to choose from.

Whether the club will take advantage of the rule which enables them to bring in two players from "outside" before Oct. 15, is not known, though it is rumored that a player prominent in the line-up of one of the better junior teams, will appear in an Aurora uniform this season.

Team strength often depends on the territory from which the club can draw, and rumor is again busy, indicating that the Aurorans will get a better break in this regard this season.

The Aurora Era of last year shows that the annual election was held about this time. A few days later some 25 lads were taking physical training at the high school gym. About Nov. 15 they were practising on Toronto ice and their first game, in the Toronto S. P. A. series, was played Nov. 20, following which they embarked upon an exhibition series with Midland, Orillia, Sutton and Barrie.

This season it is anticipated that hockey activities will follow a similar plan. A hockey meeting for all players in Aurora and district will likely be called next week, and the coach will take on the job of finding new players from the juvenile and high school crops of last year.

ABOUT TOWN

FREE ADVICE

The other day among the boys we thought we heard a lot of noise—'twas an aged man with an angry voice telling the lads how to make their choice . . . of girls.

And yet, again, just yestermorn, a man with a beard and a voice forlorn made us wish we'd never been born by telling us how to shuck our corn . . . or peas.

Then, just as we were going out of our mind, there came upon us a lady kind who, thinking we were either dumb or blind, told us just how we ought to mind . . . our furnace.

So we dashed for home on aching feet—thinking to find a safe retreat—but someone stopped us on the street and told us how we ought to beat . . . an egg.

Then we read in a magazine of a man with a brain, alert and keen, who wants us back in the old canteen—back in the madhouse European . . . or worse.

All free advice is good, we spose—though we say it looking down our nose—and we could follow it if we chose—but it happens we are one of those . . . who don't.

For advice—though free as the rind off bacon—may cost as much as goose . . . if taken.

A BAXTERIAN LETTER

A. Beverley Baxter, British M. P., writes what he terms a "Canadian letter" in one of our national magazines. Usually he confines his remarks to persons and things European but recently he has taken a holiday in Canada, and on his way back has written some remarks about Canada.

Canada, feels Mr. Baxter, is "a country without national discipline." "Canadians, with their genius for individual freedom, have not imposed upon themselves the national discipline which is so markedly displayed in Great Britain. The citizen has developed more rapidly than the state," he complains.

Britain, on the other hand, is quite different—so says Mr. Baxter. "The ambition of nearly every man in Britain is to rise up to a position in the community where, as a justice of the peace, an alderman or a borough councillor, he can serve the state."

Whether Mr. Baxter got that way as the result of trying to describe Britain from a Canadian point of view, or from describing Canada from a British viewpoint, we know not. Whichever may be the case, however, it seems Mr. Baxter's attempt to describe both countries on the same holiday has resulted in extraordinarily muddled views.

If we are wrong—and Baxter right—why is it that the many Englishmen in this country have permitted us to grow into a race of individualists, or that these same Englishmen have not continued with their much-touted desire to serve the state?

AND ANOTHER THING

Mr. Baxter has not stopped there. He has been kind enough to indicate how Canada may "be enjoying an ever-widening prosperity." . . . "Canada can supply a sanctuary to elderly people retired from business and anxious to escape the perpetual threat of European war. . . . Canada can give industries a chance to erect factories free from the threat of bombs . . . Canada should be an immense field for British investment and a sanctuary for those who are weary of the feuds of the Old World"—so says Baxter.

How is this to be accomplished? "Closer association with Britain," is the Baxter answer. And yet, states Baxter: "Europe is doomed to trouble as the sparks fly upward . . . Europe is one vast over-crowded prison."

Baxter establishes his dwelling in the realm of paradox by suggesting that Canada could become a field for safe investment by closer association with one of a group of nations that is "doomed to trouble" and Canada should become "a sanctuary for elderly people" by keeping in closer touch with " a vast over-crowded prison."

"The tragic trapped continent of Europe!" bemoans Mr. Baxter.

Would you have us step into the trap too, Mr. Baxter? If Mr. Baxter can describe Canada as a country without a national discipline, surely we're not far off in describing Baxter as a man in need of mental discipline.

Three representatives of the Aurora high school reached championship status in their respective divisions, and, helped by their team-mates brought their high school into top place at the inter-high school field meet held in Markham last week. They gained 106 points to nose out Newmarket with 104 points.

They failed to cop the senior boys' championship, which went to J. Onasick of Richmond Hill. Howard Folliott placed first in the senior boys' 220-yard dash.

Two-Year-Old Is Object Of Search

Margaret Jean, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Harrison, caused considerable anxiety to her parents and their friends when she "disappeared" for a three-hour period on Tuesday.

Lecturer Urges Support Of Every Movement For Peace

Aurorans Enjoy Illustrated Lecture On Peace Gardens

"If this thing ever breaks in Europe, we will wish we had supported the League of Nations and every movement for peace," Henry J. Moore, of Islington, told those who attended his lecture on the Peace Gardens at the high school auditorium on Tuesday night.

Scenes of the world war were shown in striking contrast to those of the Peace Gardens. Mr. Moore is a director of the Peace Gardens. He is credited with the original idea of the gardens, and on a cairn situated on the border of the United States and Canada his name appears, the "Henry" on the Canadian side, the "Moore" on the American side, with "J." in the middle.

The Peace Gardens, made up of 900 acres on the United States side and 900 acres on the Canadian side, is situated between Manitoba and North Dakota, in the Turtle Mountains, 40 miles north of Rugby, the geographical centre of North America, Mr. Moore stated.

It exists as a memorial to the long-existing peace between the two countries, he said. Ten million children have subscribed to the project through the Junior Red Cross and donations have been received from other nations. Women's Institutes and lodges had also contributed to its support.

A warmly and eloquently expressed introduction was made by Mayor Dr. C. R. Boulding, who described Mr. Moore as a Christian gentleman, living close to nature and to God's handiwork. A vote of thanks was moved by J. M. Walton.

The race was a handicap event, and in straight time, Smith came second with a time of 26 minutes, 14 seconds, Bunn's time being 30 minutes, 17½ seconds. Foundry, Shoemakers Both Win, But Fans Call It Tie

Towners Beat Tanners 1-0 In Thursday Football Tangle

Without the services of goal judges and without scorekeepers, the football game between the foundry and the shoemakers on Thursday night of last week far from deciding the supremacy of either team, has questioned the supremacy of both.

Foundry players claim a straight 4-3 victory over their opponents. According to the shoemakers, however, the foundry team was trimmed to the tune of 3-2. And just to show their impartiality, the fans were almost unanimous in calling the tussle a 3-3 tie.

Referee F. Rowe was inclined to give Sisman's the 3-2 decision, deducting two goals from the foundry lads' estimate. The Sisman goal-keeper, however, was willing to admit that one of the disputed goals went in, and if so, then the fans' guess was right and the game was tied.

Probabilities are that if the game effects the final issue, it will have to be re-played.

The battle between the town team and the tanners was a little simpler, so far as the result was concerned, with the town being conceded a 1-0 victory. The only score of the game was made by Herb Holman, who booted one in from far out, in the second period. The ball went over the heads of the defence, took a weird bounce, and sneaked past the hands of the waiting goalie.

The games have been growing in roughness as the series progresses, as the boys begin to find new uses for their hips, knees and elbows. The Thanksgiving holiday forced suspension of the early game this week, but the schedule continues tonight.

On Sunday Mr. McPherson was able to be around again and resume his duties at Sunday school and Mr. Rowan took the evening service. He preached from the second chapter of Peter, verse 24—"Who His own self bare our sins in His own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness".

It was an earnest and soul-searching appeal, and was delivered to a crowded church. Mrs. Hartley sang two selections, and Mr. Thompson of Toronto sang "He careth for the Sparrow." On Monday, every available man was on the job and before many Sundays pass they hope to be in the new church building, when they can accommodate more people.

BLOOMINGTON

Mrs. E. A. Storry Widely Mourned

The Bloomington district was shocked with grief on Sept. 23, with news of the death of Mrs. Edgar A. Storry.

Although she had been ailing for about a year, she was about as usual until seriously stricken the week of her death. Rushed to the Private Patients' Pavilion of the Toronto General Hospital, where she was operated on, she passed away on Friday evening. The funeral, on Sunday, Sept. 25, from the late home in Bloomington, was one of the largest seen in the district for a long time.

The public service in the United church had an overflow crowd as large as those inside. The organ and pulpit were draped in black and the service was a very solemn occasion.

The service was conducted by the new pastor, Rev. I. Irwin, assisted by Rev. Herbert Lee, and Rev. E. C. French of Toronto. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, showing the esteem in which the deceased was held. Pall bearers were Dr. Matheson, Toronto, H. W. Clark, T. M. McFadden of Durham, Murray E. Steele, Toronto, Walter Tranmer and Eldon Fairles.

Born on the farm north of Lemonville, her maiden name was Helen J. Mahon, daughter of the late Thos. Mahon and Mrs. Mahon of Bloomington. Thirty-two years ago on Sept. 26 she married Edgar A. Storry of Bloomington. During all her married life Mrs. Storry was a faithful and active member and worker in the Methodist and later United church. Leader in many good works, she was for over 20 years president of the Women's Association and teacher in the Sunday-school. Truly a great vacancy has been left in the church as well as in the home.

Mrs. Storry is survived by her bereaved husband, an only daughter, Ruth, at home, and an only son, Donald, in Stouffville. Mrs. Otto Tranmer of Bloomington is an only sister. Her aged mother was among the mourners at the funeral.

Rev. E. O. Twiss was the guest speaker and gave a talk on "Victory" which was much enjoyed.

Many of us in Ontario have been much impressed by the work carried on in eastern Nova Scotia by the litte University of Saint Frances Xavier at Antigonish. But we have held back some reservations in our judgment lest we be misled as to its importance. After studying the movement for ten days we have been writing poetry about it. Of course, it is not faultless. But it does represent conscientious effort at community building: effort that is getting results.

On our tour of Cape Breton Island we visited a number of coastal villages. At one, I believe the name was Arichat, the people had dug a cellar and built the foundation for a co-operative store. They had turned out in full force to welcome us. And there was the local priest and a government fish inspector to explain the project. Many priests and some Protestant preachers are helping a great deal; so are the local agricultural representatives.

As they told us the story there appeared along the nearby road a huge tractor and grader. At times we could hardly hear the local yarn for its noise. Here was the latest and most powerful device for road building. Beyond the road was a man mowing hay on the steep hillside with the aid of one ox. On our side was the result of work with pick and shovel and wheelbarrow. The study groups had not taught the people to use the great modern machinery. But bear in mind that this machinery was not available for the rebuilding of the village. It was only available for building a road away from the village. The people took what they had and they worked together.

What use would be a co-operative store? Let me report that the retailing margin on salt had been equal to half the wholesale price. They now buy their salt co-operatively for little more than two-thirds of the price they previously paid. And salt can be even more important to a fisherman than to a farmer, even beside the briny sea. There are 12 stores in a district which could be served by two or even one. One local retailer in a coastal village had made enough money that when a new co-operative store took his business he moved to Halifax and started a wholesale. But it is questionable as to whether most of the retailers really make money. They have so many bad debts which they cannot collect. On the other hand the co-operative store has no bad debts. It sells for cash. If necessary the people borrow from their credit union, where they always repay the loan.

Primitive methods may be employed to build the co-operatives. But these are the fishing villages of a rock-bound coast where you see a little pasture field fenced off among the boulders, just large enough to accommodate a small goat.

For three days some of the best brains from Ontario and one great personality from Nova Scotia have discussed various angles of the co-operative movement. Hon. P. M. Dewan., Minister of Agriculture, and Dr. G. I. Christie, President of the Ontario Agricultural College, have expressed their desire to promote co-operative education.

Dr. Christie suggested that the conference had left the baby of co-operative education on the doorstep of the O.A.C. Someone might have pointed out to the college president that the child is no foundling, that many of those at the conference had endured the travail of its birth, and that these people are most likely to take their turn sitting up at night with it while it is cutting its teeth. But the healthy youngster is now recognized as an important element in the life of the Ontario Agricultural College, perhaps beginning to rival the stock that fill the stables or the plants which grace the fields.

There is every reason to believe that the college will develop a more balanced program, paying attention to the problems of distribution as well as those of production. One would expect to see the Department of Economics strengthened under the very capable direction of Professor W. M. Drummond. The college might develop special options in economics, co-operation and community life. Perhaps there will be special short courses where people go to study communities as well as cows.

It was unfortunate that the conference was held when so many farmers were so busy with their corn. It was also unfortunate that the conference was held when all the agricultural representatives found life consisting of just one school fair after another. It would have been a great thing to have had the representatives there. They are key men in agricultural education. They are men of experience whose job is the improvement of rural life.

Of course this is no time to sit back and "let the government do it." The government cannot do it. The government can only provide services which will enable us to do it better. We would not expect the department or the college to sow our grain for us or to milk our cows. But we have got accustomed to having these agencies develop better strains of wheat or cows and teach us new methods of husbandry.

I know that there are many farmers who think these agencies are just costly frills. They would register such complaints as they sow O.A.C. 21 barley or reap O.A.C. 144 oats or enjoy a salad discovered through education in agricultural economics. If a lot of farmers are assisted with education for economic organization which raises the standard of living for everyone there will still be farmers who will look out from their new automobiles and describe co-operatives as a lot of nonsense.

It has been a great conference at Guelph: the one on co-operation.

FLIES

By DELPHINIUM

In a true spirit of helpfulness, I asked a calling neighbor if she had plenty of beans, tomatoes, cukes, etc.

She in return suddenly asked, "Have you lots of flies?" "Yes, thank you, have you?" "Yes, thank you," with a laugh. The flies prove a new topic of conversation, for in the midst of a sentence—"Oh, those flies," and the swatter swats a noisy accompaniment to interrupted conversation.

Fly coils have proved a great success, as flies want to roost, and it is a simple thing to put the filled coils in the stove—less work than gathering the flies after spraying, for they are around the windows, among the papers and everything else.

Early in the season, I attach a fly coil to my electric light extension cord in my room, so that it hangs down beside the electric light bulb. Also it is near the window and the tiny gnats and moths of every description get in through or around the netting and fly to the light and stick to the coil. When other lights are out at night, if there are any moths around they fly to the light and get caught. So I believe the house is kept free from moths by this method.

The fly coil hanging by the kitchen light does its duty thoroughly. At this season and later when warm, appetizing smells come from the kitchen, they attract the flies. I find they do like the poison pads, set out on the verandah for them. They drink up and die, and I sweep up and burn.

September

BY GOLDEN GLOW

(Lack of space prevented publication of this article before. It is still interesting.)

The weather is always an ever-present interesting subject of conversation — for variety is the spice of life — and we certainly have had variety enough.

For instance, August broke the record for long sustained heat, and especially humidity, according to the weatherman — and if this early frost hasn't broken another record, we think it should have.

Fancy frost within two days of August, an August noted for its sustained, continued heat. If anybody recalls just 365 days ago, the first days of the Canadian National Exhibition, it will be remembered that it was terrifically hot — hot and humid.

The first day of September was even worse, and September second, worse still. There hadn't been anything to equal it for 95 years. Then September third was still very hot, and all this time the infantile paralysis epidemic was raging.

Then came the sudden tragic death of one of our splendid young boys, which nearly caused a panic in Newmarket. I refer to Wallace Cutting, one of our talented young men, just in his teens and nearly through school. At once word went round that both public and high schools would not open after Labor Day, would be closed till further notice. Scholars were to remain in their own homes and not congregate anywhere. There was no Sunday-school nor moving picture shows.

We surely will never forget last September! I said at the time that the town was like Hamlintown after the pied piper had led all the children away when the mayor wouldn't pay him the bag of gold in payment for services rendered in driving out rats. It was a day of rejoicing when the medical health officer once more declared the ban lifted and children free to resume normal life and activities.

And last September there were drought and dust storms in the west, but this September sees a change there also, for in many places, in spite of grasshoppers and other plagues, farmers are having a bountiful harvest. But what about Ontario's harvest? Did you ever see such an abundance of everything? We are surely blessed here in old Ontario, and our churches should be full when we hold harvest thanksgiving services.

And not only fruit and vegetables to gladden our hearts, but September's wonderful flowers to gladden the eye as well. Anyone who was at the flower show last week would see a sample of what we can grow right here in Newmarket.

Such marvellous glads — every shade of every color, each spike so tall and straight. It must be a revelation to some people to drop in to one of our flower shows.

And not only gladiolus are in bloom in our gardens but plenty of other delightful things, for the hardy autumn perennials are in full bloom and will last right up till the frost comes. And the late annuals, the asters and the jolly zinnias, the lovely petunias and all the rest. For abundance of bloom till frost, commend me to the petunia. Dry weather never has put a stop to their wonderful power of bloom.

A young chap came to my door the other day to show me some gourds he had grown, mock oranges we used to call them, and they surely did look exactly like nice juicy oranges. We used to grow them in our garden when I was a girl, and all sorts of other green gourds, but it is several years since I have seen any of them.

I fancy it is hard to keep the seed from getting mixed. One year we had some queer specimens. They were shaped like squash but were pumpkin colored and so hard we chopped one open with an axe.

September is a glad, golden month, and soon the maples will begin to turn red and make things more glorious still — then Squaw Winter will usher in Indian Summer, so as I said before "Variety is the Spice of Life" and before we know it harvest homes will usher in hot fowl suppers, the joy of all menfolk, even if it means long hours of extra work for the church women.

PICKS STRAWBERRIES FOR THANKSGIVING DESSERT

Ben Price brought a bunch of strawberry plants to The Era office on Tuesday which were laden with both ripe and green strawberries. He had picked them in the garden of Thomas Scythes, of Barrie, formerly of Newmarket, on Thanksgiving day. Mr. Price believes this to be quite a record for this time of year. Incidentally, Mr. Price said that there were enough ripe strawberries on the vines for the family's thanksgiving dinner dessert, which was much enjoyed.

JUDGES POTATOES

York County Junior Farmers held their achievement day at Mount Albert last Thursday, with W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative in charge of the judging. The judging of potatoes, grown by the boys from seed supplied them in the spring was one of the major events. Field events followed the judging.

FIELD INSPECTION IS PLANNED FOR POTATOES

Potato growers experienced considerable loss last year from a disease known as Fusarium Wilt which caused a browning of the stem-end of the tubers, resulting is a large volume of potatoes that were not marketable. As the stem-end browning did not show on the surface, many infected potatoes were marketed and further depressed a weak potato market. All growers did not heed the warning to purchase fresh seed which had been proven by field inspection to be free of this disease.

Recently the county agricultural representative, together with the provincial potato fieldman, examined several commercial fields of potatoes in York county and found a considerable quantity of this disease showing in the tops and tubers. This fact, together with the discovery of another somewhat similar disease, has prompted the Ontario department of agriculture through George Wilson, commissioner of marketing, to provide an inspection service. As far as possible, his staff will inspect all commercial potato crops to acquaint growers with any diseases present and advise growers regarding their seed supply for 1939.

Any grower wishing this service, which is free of charge, is advised to apply at once to the Commissioner of Marketing, Parliament Bldgs., Toronto, or to W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative, Newmarket. The season is getting late and prompt action is necessary as many of these diseases can be detected much more readily in the field.

Poor Kid!

A school teacher, after examination of the pupils in her class by the school nurse, wrote the following note to the parents of a certain little boy: "Your boy, Charles, shows signs of astigmatism. Will you please investigate and take steps to correct it."

The next morning she received a reply from the boy's father, who wrote: "I don't exactly understand what Charlie has done, but I have walloped him tonight and you can wallop him tomorrow. That ought to help some."

Lghtening the Burden

An Irishman carrying a large sack of potatoes along a lonely road was overtaken by a man driving a horse and cart.

The driver offered Pat a lift, which he gladly accepted, but still kept the sack of potatoes on his back. The driver told him to put them down in the cart.

"Sure," Pat replied, "I'm thankful for the lift ye give me, but I don't wont ye to be burdened with the taters as well."

Story Of Bogarttown

The early history of Bogarttown as written by the last of the Bogarts to leave Bogarttown, Mrs. Fred Brillinger, Newmarket, and dedicated to the Women's Institute.

By MYRTLE BOGART BRILLINGER

In the year 1800 a number of United Empire Loyalists (these were British subjects who had lived in the British colonies now form a part of the United States. When these colonies threw off the British yoke, these loyalists, wishing to retain their connection with Britain, left their homes and migrated to Canada, bringing with them only what belongings they could carry) arrived in York county. Among the earliest records we find the names of Bogart, Wilson, Starr, Rogers, Taylor, Stephens, Widdifield, Randall, Toole and others.

A large number of these settlers were Quakers. The Gazette of Oct. 4, 1806, contains an address from the Quakers to Governor Francis Gore which concludes by "hoping thy administration may be such as to be a terror to the evil-minded and a pleasure to them that do well. Then will the province flourish under thy direction, which is the earnest desire and prayer of thy sincere friends."

This quaintly worded and characteristic document was presented by Timothy Rogers and Amos Armitage. The first named, together with Jacob Lundy, took a leading part in the affairs of this settlement.

Later there was some delay in issuing the patents to their lands and Governor Hunter, who had just arrived in the country, summoned all the officials to whom the Quakers had unsuccessfully appealed for more than a year. The plea of "press of business" was advanced by a Mr. Jarvis, their spokesman. "Sir," replied the governor, "if they are not forthcoming, every one of them, and placed in the hands of these gentlemen, here in my presence at noon on Thursday next — By George! I'll un-Jarvis you!" Two days later the patents were delivered. Other days, other manners. What would be thought nowadays if our lieutenant-governor should talk to our provincial secretary in that style.

In 1526 among the municipal records are found the names of Eli Gorham, John Bogart, town wardens; 1828, Martin Bogart and John Bogart, Sr., 1829, Martin Bogart and Eli Gorham, 1839 municipal representatives included, chairman, Joshua Wilson; wardens, Philip Bogart, John Miller; 1849, Henry Widdifield.

In 1852 Joseph Collins, Sr., one of the early Welsh pioneers who had built a mill where Uxbridge now stands was killed by an accident. On the maternal side the Collins were connected with the Bogarts, whose name is so frequently named in the history of Bogarttown, they being of Dutch extraction.

These early settlers were principally farmers, but saw-mills, grist-mills, brick making, general store, blacksmith and wheelwright shops, were in operation. Everyone built his own house and barns, as well as hewing out the material in the woods. In 1857 land was donated by Francis Starr and Mr. Taylor, and a fine schoolhouse of brick was erected. In this schoolhouse a splendid Sunday-school was carried on, dating from about 1889 to 1907, when it was discontinued.

Unfortunately the records have been lost but my memory carries me back to early childhood when the workers included the Randalls, Starrs, Tooles, Widdifields, Bogarts and many others, including Wesley Williams and his wife, who was organist for many years, Albert Bogart being superintendent for a long time.

Quite recently the schoolhouse has been modernized by the local community club, and many pleasant social entertainments, etc., are given there.

Mr. Redmond Simpson also added much to the refinement of the community by the beautiful flowers and plants grown in large glass "greenhouses," giving much of his time showing the children and adults too, the pots of beautiful roses and other plants.

I well remember him snipping off a lovely white rose and me carrying it home to my mother. Many a copper was saved till it counted up to five, when I would carry it over to buy a small fuschia foliage or a pretty geranium plant.

Mrs. Simpson was a daughter of the Stephens. Carrie and Daisy were my best chums, Mabel, Fred, Cecil, Alberta and Fleda being younger.

1865—There were two blacksmith shops on the corner at Pleasant Valley, one being operated about 1565 by a partnership consisting of Thos. Dolan and Asa Rodgers, later by Jos. Slanker and the other by William Widdifield, a very fine Christian gentleman. Both these places have been closed for a number of years.

The old brick shop at present owned by Mr. Flintoff was one of the first brick buildings in the community, and was carried on by the Wilkin family, later by Nathan McCauley, Phil Mortson, and later again about 1890 by Fred Brillinger, who sold it to Mr. Flintoff, the present owner.

1803—John Bogart built the first saw-mill at Bogarttown; 1806—a grist-mill; 1811, the first frame two-story house, north of Toronto. In 1830 a large frame mill costing $10,000 was built, which did a large local trade, besides exporting to distant points, including Montreal, thus making Bogarttown quite famous. About 35 years later this mill was burned, but was rebuilt on a smaller scale, only to be again burned about 1875. However, it was again built and chopping principally was carried on by the Johnson family, Peterman, Stokes and Peter Kitto, who sold to the present owner, Fred S. Hoover, who had the machinery removed. It is now only a landmark.

Much of the information gathered in this account was gleaned from the two minute books dating from 1857, being records of Bogarttown school section 3.

Many notable men and women have had Bogarttown for a birthplace. Those early pioneers were noted for thrift and generosity and high ideals, and it is noteworthy that as a community today their descendants are still striving for those same ideals.

The primitive log buildings have given way to homes most modern, but nothing makes us realize the trials and tribulations of those pioneers so vividly as the searching and obtaining of those early records of one hundred years and more ago. Very few of the early landmarks can be found today.

Property holders in Bogarttown, S. S. 3, Whitchurch, in 1858 were Allen Toole, Alfred Lundy, Arnoldi Haight, Eli Hollingshead, Elisha Dilman, Eli Gorham, Francis Starr, Francis Smith, George Vernon, George Hollingshead, Hannah Shrigley, Henry Minthrow, Henry Wilson, Henry Widdifield, J. FLOWERS AND WEEDS

Part Two

There is a flower comparatively new to us, the Shoo Fly plant. It grows luxuriously out of doors, has a pretty bluebell flower which lasts but a day and leaves a decorative seed pod.

So the branches are soon covered with a succession of those large grooved seed containers, green at first, then becoming pale yellow. It is interesting in all stages.

One plant grows an abundance of seed which easily drops out and so plants itself. It has the character of a weed to be. I found a beautiful specimen of it growing in the root field. Next year there will be another lot of plants to be weeded out. And in each of the gardens it has planted its foot and hopes to stay. Whether the flies dislike it or not, I have my doubts.

The portulaca is a beautiful flower and shows up at its best in rock gardens, where its tiny disks of very tiny silver seeds may drop and perpetuate their kind. But where did its cousin, the garden purslane, begin? Perhaps because of its beauty it got a foot-hold. Just when the weed hoeing seems over for the season, the purslane covers the ground with its tiny green brown leaves and though I have hoed and cultivated till you would think they must be dead, up they would come and presently cover the ground—beautiful with their fine fleshy leaves and minute yellow flowers, but what strength they must take from the ground to grow so prolifically! The purslane is a weed to be exterminated if possible.

And at the same time the red root or pig weed insists on poking up its head. The ground seems full of the seed. If one of those heavily seeded heads gets a chance to drop its seed, and if the many plants I see in some places are not pulled up and burnt, there will be trouble for someone for seasons to come.

"Let a weed get ahead of you one season, and you are after it for seven years." Isn't that right? So for a gardener, it is 'Hoe your row, and keep at it."

There are beautiful decorative plants classed as weeds. Yarrow seems harmless enough and its flat head of beautiful white flowers—one species has reddish flowers—and its fine fern-like leaves are really beautiful in a bouquet. I cut bunches of this plant while in flower, dry it and store it. In the winter you can make a tea of some of it. It is a fine kidney remedy and a good cleanser for the blood stream.

Another decorative flower is that of the wild carrot, with its beautiful medallion-like flower heads known as Queen Anne's lace. The sprays are fine in bouquets, as are baby's breath. They may be dipped in dye and used as decoration with any color scheme.

The last issue of the Farmer's Advocate, in its editorial column, twice mentions the menace of the wild carrot. I had noticed it along the roadside on the way to and from Stratford and kept saying, "There is more Queen Anne's lace."

The others would say dully, "That is wild carrot." Yes, it is, but the flower is called Queen Anne's lace, and is one of the very daintiest, with fine lace medallions.

I noticed it growing on the lawn of our church and across the road in the schoolhouse grounds, where the grass was not trampled. There was lots of it, dainty and beautiful—but a weed—a weed due for extermination.

Chicory, also called succory, is another weed. Its beautiful corn flowers, blue flowers, lighten up the roadside. Long ago people grew chicory, dug and dried its roots and ground them in the little coffee grinder and added it to coffee. Did for fun but for a spring medicine. Tea was made of a bunch of burrs and we drank it as spring medicine. It certainly is a good blood cleanser.

In a swamp I visit grows the jewel weed, or touch-me-not in greatest profusion. Every corner is full of it growing high and lush. It has a medicinal value too. There is enough medicine in that swamp to heal the sores of the world. Yet the jewel flower is a weed.

Conscription Of Her Youth Seen As Canada's Downfall

Armaments Costing World 17 Billion Dollars in 1938

By LEONARD HARMAN

A plan is being put forward by Lieut.-Col. A. T. Everett for the conscription of Canadian youth for army purposes at the rate of 60,000 a year. Its sponsor believes that "there is no truer form of national insurance for the preservation of our national identity than the ability to muster a defence force to be feared by a possible aggressor." He thinks the plan "would provide an opportunity to bring unemployed men into line; to teach them citizenship, discipline and love of their own country."

Raymond Booth, pastor of the Society of Friends in Toronto, takes issue with the plan. "Civilian military training on a compulsory basis is not put into effect to build up efficient armed forces so much as to militarize the civilian mind," he states.

On the other hand Wilfrid Kipling in this vein: "Boasting, Heighington, ex-M. P. P., quotes and what is your boasting worth, if you grudge a year of service to the lordliest life on earth."

Since Kipling has passed on to his Valhalla it may suffice to state that his words were not muttered through a gas mask. He would find the present mass slaughter of civilians far removed from the rabbit hunting of shooting natives on British frontiers. Even at that Kipling's words do not ring true this Thanksgiving Sunday afternoon. Is not the greater he who serves rather than he who slaughters?

In the year of our Lord 1938 we are spending 17 billion dollars on armaments throughout the world. That amount would certainly solve the housing problem of all America. The Great War cost some 400 billion dollars. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, has computed that this would have bought five acres of land, a $2,500 house and $1,000 worth of equipment for every family in United States, Britain, France, Belgium, Russia, Germany and Australia. Besides this it would have permanently endowed great universities and libraries for all these countries; and there would have been enough left over to buy France and Belgium.

I am not sure how conscription would be received in Canada. There are many of us tracing our descent from generations of British patriots who are convinced that we can be most loyal to Canada by a fellowship with the whole wide world. We still have hope that goodwill may prevail as the most effective form of national defence. We have no intention of killing people because we do not agree with them. Indeed the horror of war was largely responsible for forcing some kind of agreement in the last crisis. Then we must remember that there are millions of French Canadians who are not very certain about their support of British Imperialism. And there are many of other origin so that nearly half of our population is of non-British descent. Compulsory military training might do more to divide Canada than to unite her.

Once we introduce compulsory military training and "militarize our civilian mind" we put an end to democracy which we have boasted as our ideal. Peace and democracy cannot be advanced by war and dictatorship. The more we enter the armament race the more likely we are to be drawn into some European scrap.

I think we should take the unemployed out of the bread lines but that we should not put them in military lines. There are still a lot of homes and roads and bridges to build. And I have yet to be shown that honest creative work is inferior to any form of regimented goose-stepping.

OVERCOMES OBSTACLES

Great faith will move mountains, members of Trinity United church are saying, as the shingling and incidental repairs of the church building, which will cost over $1,000, are just about finished. Handicapped by temporary loss of his voice, Rev. R. R. McMath, the church's new pastor, was still able to convince the congregation that they could make the much-needed repairs if they really wanted to do so.

Queensville

A special speaker meeting will be held in the Friends church, Newmarket, on Wednesday, Oct. 19, at 2 o'clock.

Plenty Scrap Marks Bouts

Plenty of punch and scrappiness marked the inauguration of boxing bouts in the town hall last Thursday evening. Five bouts made up the evening's bill of fare. Nearly 400 saw the fights.

In the feature of the evening, 147-lb. class, Johnny O'Connor, Newmarket, defeated Aubrey Sharp, Toronto, with a decision in a five-round bout. O'Connor started to learn the game only a year ago, and showed promise in his fight with Sharp, who was said to hold a record of eight knockouts in his last 14 fights.

In the first bout Bert Russell, Toronto, knocked down Jack Elliott, Toronto, twice, but Elliott went the five rounds. Russell got the decision. This was the 118-lb. class.

Tommy Foster, Toronto, scored a technical knockout in the third round of the second fixture over Bruce Davis, Stouffville, in the 126-lb. class. In the 135-lb. class Alf. McComb, Newmarket, was outclassed by Ernie Hicks, Toronto, but put up a good battle for the five rounds.

An exhibition bout between Billy Hadfield, Aurora, and Walter Hicks, Toronto, went three rounds. No decision was given.

The next fights will take place next Thursday, Oct. 20.

British Secretary of State for War, Leslie Hore-Belisha, this week announced the complete reorganization of the territorial army of 200,000 men, as part of an effort to speed up Britain's fighting machine.

Terrible forest fires in the Rainy River district, near Fort Frances, took seventeen lives since Monday, but on Wednesday morning were believed to be under control. These fires were the worst to occur in northern Ontario since 1922. A complete relief organization has been set up to take care of the fire refugees.

Twenty persons, 16 passengers and four crew, were killed on Thanksgiving Day, when a Belgian airliner lost a wing and crashed in the Ruhr Valley in northwestern Germany. No one survived.

Official announcement has been made that King George VI and Queen Elizabeth have accepted the Canadian prime minister's invitation to visit Canada next year. It is expected that they will arrive in the early summer and spend about three weeks in the dominion.

Mary Osborne, Newmarket, was the runner-up for the senior girls' championship. Newmarket winners in the various competitions follow. In the senior boys' events, Bob Dales won the hop, skip and jump and the pole vault, and in the junior boys' events the hop, skip and jump was won by B. Jelley. Mary Osborne won the senior girls' high jump and Marjorie McCarnan won the senior baseball throw. Erma Hall won the junior girls' throw, and Newmarket won the junior girls' relay race.

BUSINESS VS. MARRIAGE

By MURIEL THORPE

In the last few months there has been a great deal of controversy over the married women in business. This is a topic with two eligible views.

Taking the view that a married woman's place is in the home there are many facts to prove it. Firstly, if a man cannot support a wife, he should not marry. If married women work where will single girls find a position? There certainly are a great many young girls who need work badly. In cases of "bachelor families" there should be no need for a wife to go out to business. In a great many cases this is done to gain the many luxuries of life or as the slang expression is, "to keep up with the Jones'."

This latter reason breeds contempt and jealousy among the unemployed girls toward the married women workers. This is one thing which a country wishes to overcome because it is not a healthy attitude and certainly not one that maintains peace.

Then to take the viewpoint that married women should work if they so desire one can make a good comeback. If young couples wish to marry but are not able to keep house without two pay envelopes, therefore, why shouldn't the girl keep her position. Of course, this contradicts one of the former arguments for the other side of this topic, but they are both logical. On the other hand, if young people cannot marry it will undermine their health and break down their morals. Which is worse, married women in business or a country wrecked morally and spiritually?

Then again, if people are married and some misfortune befalls them that the wife is forced to work, this is also another logical reason because it is better to be independent than to become relief recipients.

So when one looks at both sides of this question, one is convinced that it all depends on a person's circumstances, whether a married woman should or should not take her place in the business world.

JUNIORS ATTEND SCHOOL

Interior decorating was the theme on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week at the department of agriculture office when Miss Betty Wallace gave instruction to a group of Junior Institute leaders.

WEATHER IS WARM

A heat wave struck Newmarket and district on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. An unusually warm spell proved embarrassing to those who had already started their furnaces.

Mrs. Epstein was an overly conscientious person. Therefore, when she engaged a new maid, she asked as many questions as are asked in a civil service examination.

"Have you," she asked sternly, "any religious views?"

"No, ma'am, I haven't," answered the girl, "but I've got some dandy snapshots of Niagara Falls and the Great Lakes."
